What is Persuasion?
Presenting the "Argument"

• The goal of argument is to win acceptance of one's ideas.
• Modern argumentation theory has roots in Greek and Roman thinking (Aristotle).
• We judge evidence, investigate carefully, state ideas accurately, and listen critically.

• Goal: to change others’ point of view or to move others to take action.
CLAIM V. COUNTERCLAIM

Claim: The overall thesis the writer will argue for; the author’s argument.

Counterclaim: A claim that negates or disagrees with the thesis/claim.
What is Rhetoric?

- Rhetoric (n) - the art of speaking or writing effectively (Webster's Definition).

- According to Aristotle, rhetoric is "the ability, in each particular case, to see the available means of persuasion."

- He described three main forms of rhetoric: Ethos, Logos, and Pathos.
Pathos  Ethos  Logos
Ethos: ETHICS (Creditability)

Ethos: the source's credibility, the speaker's/author's authority

- Greek for ‘Character’
- To make the audience decide right or wrong about what is being presented.
- Political issues, national beliefs, religious issues, etc…
- The writer or speaker appeals to the audience’s sense of ethical behavior (“it’s the right thing to do”)
- The writer or speaker presents him or herself to the audience as credible, trustworthy, honest, and ethical.
Creditability?

• Does the audience respect you?
• Does the audience believe you are of good character?
• Does the audience believe you are generally trustworthy?
• Does the audience believe you are an authority on this speech topic?

Keep in mind that it isn’t enough for you to know that you are a credible source. Your audience must know this. Ethos is your level of credibility as perceived by your audience.
Ethos
Ethos Example

In the following example, note how Nancy Mairs establishes her credibility and trustworthiness and authority to write about this subject by being honest. Mairs admits she is uncertain about her own motives and shows she understands the discomfort others’ have with this subject.
People—crippled or not—wince at the word “cripple,” as they do not at “handicapped” or “disabled.” Perhaps I want them to wince. I want them to see me as a tough customer, one to whom the fates/gods/viruses have not been kind, but who can face the brutal truth of her existence squarely. As a cripple, I swagger.

—Nancy Mairs, “On Being a Cripple”
Ethos is an argument based on character.

The writer or speaker presents him or herself to the reader as credible, trustworthy, honest, and ethical.
Pathos: EMOTION

- Greek for ‘suffering’ or ‘experience’
- Pathos: the emotional or motivational appeals; vivid language, emotional language and numerous sensory details.
- To make the audience feel something about what is presented to it
- Children, animals, illness, memories, etc…
- “Tugs at your heart strings”
- There is a potential for harm if the appeal is not heeded
- EFFECT: Evokes an emotional response
How to appeal to emotion...

• Do your words evoke feelings of … love? … sympathy? … fear?
• Do your visuals evoke feelings of compassion? … envy?
• Does your characterization of the competition evoke feelings of hate? contempt?
• Emotional connection can be created in many ways by a speaker, perhaps most notably by stories, but also anecdotes, analogies, similes, and metaphors.
• It is often to link an aspect of our primary message with a triggered emotional response from the audience.
Pathos
PLEASE DON'T SHOOT MY DOG
Pathos Example:

- How does this advertisement appeal to emotion? Why?
Pathos Example

In the following example from a speech by Winston Churchill, note the use of anaphora (repetition of a word or group of words at the beginning of items in a series). This repetition emphasizes the point and expresses passion and emotion. Moreover, the repetition affects the audience emotionally.
Pathos Example

_We shall_ not flag or fail. _We shall_ go on to the end. _We shall fight_ in France, _we shall fight_ on the seas and oceans, _we shall fight_ with growing confidence and growing strength in the air, _we shall_ defend our island, whatever the cost may be, _we shall fight_ on the beaches, _we shall fight_ on the landing grounds, _we shall fight_ in the fields and in the streets, _we shall fight_ in the hills. _We shall_ never surrender.

—Winston Churchill, speech to the House of Commons, June 4, 1940
Review

Pathos: argument based on feelings

Using pathos means appealing to readers’ emotions and feelings.
Logos: LOGIC

Logos is an argument based on facts, statistics, authorities, evidence, and reason.

- Greek for ‘word’
- Using logos means appealing to the readers’ sense of what is logical.
- Very straightforward, and not “fluff”. It has a very scientific, factual approach.

EFFECT: Evokes a cognitive, rationale response
How can you appeal to Logic?

• Does your message make sense?
• Is your message based on facts, statistics, and evidence?
• Will your call-to-action lead to the desired outcome that you promise?
Logos Example:

Idea: Students should be allowed to use cell phones during school hours.

List three supporting facts and/or statistics that will support the aforementioned idea.

Logos Example

In the following example, note how Ian Ayres uses evidence from experience (her work environment, Delta Airlines, the University of Chicago). This evidence establishes the precedent that Ayres uses to compare to the current situation that she argues should be changed.
Logos Example

We don’t have single-sex toilets at home, and we don’t need them at the office. Then there’s also the small question of efficiency. I see my male colleagues waiting in line to use the men’s room, when the women’s toilet is unoccupied. Which is precisely why Delta Airlines doesn’t label those two bathrooms at the back of the plane as being solely for men and women. It just wouldn’t fly.
Few of our children breath fresh air in their schools, which are being sprayed, inside and out, with millions of pounds of deadly, nervous system destroying pesticides.

What are the details provided in this claim?
Logos = logic

Logos is an argument based on facts, evidence and reason.

Using logos means appealing to the readers’ sense of what is logical.
Should persuasive writing have more than one appeal?

Yes! The more appeals used, the more likely the reader will connect with it.
"I will end this war in Iraq responsibly, and finish the fight against al Qaeda and the Taliban in Afghanistan. I will rebuild our military to meet future conflicts. But I will also renew the tough, direct diplomacy that can prevent Iran from obtaining nuclear weapons and curb Russian aggression. I will build new partnerships to defeat the threats of the 21st century: terrorism and nuclear proliferation; poverty and genocide; climate change and disease. And I will restore our moral standing, so that America is once again that last, best hope for all who are called to the cause of freedom, who long for lives of peace, and who yearn for a better future."

"However, although private final demand, output, and employment have indeed been growing for more than a year, the pace of that growth recently appears somewhat less vigorous than we expected. Notably, since stabilizing in mid-2009, real household spending in the United States has grown in the range of 1 to 2 percent at annual rates, a relatively modest pace. Households' caution is understandable. Importantly, the painfully slow recovery in the labor market has restrained growth in labor income, raised uncertainty about job security and prospects, and damped confidence. Also, although consumer credit shows some signs of thawing, responses to our Senior Loan Officer Opinion Survey on Bank Lending Practices suggest that lending standards to households generally remain tight."

• "I am not unmindful that some of you have come here out of great trials and tribulations. Some of you have come fresh from narrow jail cells. And some of you have come from areas where your quest -- quest for freedom left you battered by the storms of persecution and staggered by the winds of police brutality. You have been the veterans of creative suffering. Continue to work with the faith that unearned suffering is redemptive. Go back to Mississippi, go back to Alabama, go back to South Carolina, go back to Georgia, go back to Louisiana, go back to the slums and ghettos of our northern cities, knowing that somehow this situation can and will be changed."

The report concerned a teenager who had been shot because he had angered a group of his male peers. This act of violence caused me to recapture a memory from my own adolescence because of an instructive parallel in my own life with this boy who had been shot. When I was a teenager some thirty-five years ago in the New York metropolitan area, I wrote a regular column for my high school newspaper. One week, I wrote a column in which I made fun of the fraternities in my high school. As a result, I elicited the anger of some of the most aggressive teenagers in my high school. A couple of nights later, a car pulled up in front of my house, and the angry teenagers in the car dumped garbage on the lawn of my house and shot up the place.
